Dear colleagues and friends,

It is a great pleasure for me and my organizing team to invite you to the 14th Conference of the European Society for Clinical Hemorheology and Microcirculation.
The conference will be held in Dresden from 27th to the 30th of June 2007.

As president of the European Society I am happy to welcome the European National Societies and working groups, the members of the advisory committee as well as non-european, scholars in the field of clinical hemorheology and of microcirculation to participate in the conference by sending proposals for topics, lectures, symposia, oral communications and posters.

This is the third time that Germany hosts the european conference. The first one was organized by Holger Schmid-Schönbein in Baden-Baden, the second one by Albrecht Ehrly in Frankfurt. I enjoyed both important meetings an hope that our scientific program will present an actual overview on the developments in basic an clinical hemorheology and microcirculation and pave the ground for fruitful interdisciplinary discussions. We hope that you will enjoy not only the scientific program, but also the social side of the meeting and the ambience of the beautiful city of Dresden.

During the conference, a ceremony will be held for the Fahraeus Medal, assigned according to the rules stated in the constitution of the society in recognition of the scientific excellence in the field. I am honoured to welcome such distinguished scientists in Dresden, Germany.

On this occasion the members of the organizing committee would like to thank in advance the many highly esteemed speakers and chairpersons for their enthusiasm in participation and their valuable contribution on this meeting.

We are looking forward to a lively discussion leading to new ideas and cooperations for future scientific work.

Friedrich Jung
President of the European Society for Clinical Hemorheology and Microcirculation
